Heading to Preschool with an IEP

The following resources may be helpful for families with children entering preschool by providing a better understanding of the various preschool options available for children with IEPs, the importance of high-quality inclusion and the least restrictive environment, and where to go for more support or with questions about your child’s education.

Transition from Early On® to Preschool:
We understand that transitions can feel overwhelming. If your child needs continued supports and is eligible for Part B services, there are resources to help support you during the transition from Early On and IFSPs to Early Childhood Special Education and IEPs.

Preschool Settings:
This is where a student with a disability receives special education and related services. Placement is an IEP team decision. IDEA requires placement in the least restrictive environment (LRE) for each child, a setting that is based on the child’s IEP and that should be reviewed at least annually. It is important to remember that special education is not a place, and the preschool setting should be what is best for the child. This could mean special education is provided through walk-in services, a private preschool, and/or any of the following:

High-Quality Inclusion and the Least Restrictive Environment:
Most students with disabilities should attend preschool with their non-disabled peers. We know that where a child attends preschool can set the trajectory for the rest of their educational career and life. We also know that high-quality inclusion and access to the Least Restrictive Environment benefits all students in the classroom—not just students with disabilities.

Dispute Resolution:
Knowing and advocating for your rights is an important part of helping your child succeed in school. If you ever have a dispute with the school, it’s important to have written documentation to support your position. IDEA includes a section called Procedural Safeguards. These safeguards are designed to protect the rights of parents and their child and provide a way to resolve their disputes. Parents have the right to disagree with decisions that the school system makes.

Advocacy and Communication:
Parents are a child’s first and best advocate. Parents who learn good communication skills can be even more effective. It takes time, energy, and effort to build skills to communicate clearly and collaborate effectively. Becoming a more effective advocate by enhancing your communication skills can be a great benefit to your child’s education.

Michigan Alliance for Families Learning Resources:
Michigan Alliance for Families is a statewide resource to connect families of children with disabilities to resources to help improve their children’s education. We help facilitate parent involvement as a means of improving educational services and outcomes for students with disabilities. Michigan Alliance for Families can assist you in knowing your rights, effectively communicating your child’s needs, and advising how to help them develop and learn.
