Students with disabilities have many options for enrolling in degree and non-degree college programs after high school. Transition planning in the IEP can help these students navigate the college admissions process and financial aid applications.

In this online workshop, we will discuss:

- Finding the right college for a student's unique needs.
- How to request learning supports in college.
- How to coordinate adult services.

Michigan Alliance for Families has a wealth of resources on postsecondary education to share, especially if you think college is not a possibility.

Who should attend?

Families of young adults with disabilities, students with disabilities, school staff, and other community members.
